Dear Mr. Spielman:

Your letter of 28 October addressed to the Director, Civilian Intelligence Agency has been received by this office. I might mention that there is no such agency in the U. S. Government.

I note in your letter that you requested information concerning the procedure to obtain authorization for regular and reserve officers to attend a nation-wide conference conducted annually by the National Security Council. I have checked this with the National Security Council and was informed that no such conference is held.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

Assistant to the Director

This office has been informed that annually the National Security Council conducts a nationwide conference to which a limited number of Regular and Reserve Officers may request authorization for attendance as part of their respective training in their military positions.

Since this unit is a Civil Affairs organization and every member thereof must obtain a clearance prior to assignment or enlistment, the Commanding Officer believes that attendance at the conference is of prime importance to any or all members of this organization.

Any information concerning possible means or procedure to obtain such an authorization for attendance will be appreciated.

Very truly yours,
